

Janice K. Edward
MSN, BSN, RN
Clinical Nurse Educator
Oncology & Emergency Nursing Specialist
Advocate for Nursing Excellence

Janice Edward is a dedicated and highly experienced Registered Nurse with a Master of Science in Nursing and over a decade of clinical expertise spanning oncology, emergency care, pediatric services, and nursing education. She currently serves as a Clinical Nurse Educator at Memorial Cancer Institute, where she leads onboarding, competency development, and quality improvement initiatives to elevate nursing practice and patient outcomes.

Janice Edward has held diverse nursing roles across leading healthcare institutions, including Mount Sinai Hospital, University of Miami Hospital and Clinics, and Baptist Hospital, where she served as a Charge Nurse in high-acuity emergency and oncology settings. Her expertise includes chemotherapy administration, pediatric emergency care, clinical instruction, and protocol-driven research nursing.

Throughout her career, Janice has demonstrated a passion for mentorship, having served as a preceptor for new graduates and a clinical instructor at Fortis College. She has been an active contributor to HAZMAT and Rapid Response Teams, and is committed to professional growth through active memberships in organizations such as the Association of Nursing Professional Development and the Oncology Nursing Society (Miami-Dade and Broward Chapters).

Janice Edward is known for her ability to seamlessly coordinate interdisciplinary care, implement evidence-based practices, and advocate for patient and staff needs. She is certified in ACLS, BLS, PALS, and chemotherapy administration through ONS. A lifelong learner and leader, she continues to advance nursing education and practice through innovation, collaboration, and compassionate care.
